TARGET AUDIENCE
Designed for all UC Health faculty at all ranks (Assistant, Associate and Professors), Staff Assembly Representatives and AMWA Chapter Presidents. Participants with an interest in leadership, mentoring and diversity, as well as early career faculty considering a future leadership position and wanting to learn about paths to leadership, will benefit the most from this program.

EDUCATIONAL NEED
This conference is designed for faculty in health sciences (research, teaching, administrative, and clinical), staff assembly representatives, and AMWA chapter presidents at the University of California campuses. The conference is aligned with UC’s commitment to empower faculty for lifelong learning and to develop the next generation of leaders in biomedical sciences.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES
By bringing together a diverse mix of faculty and through the conference theme of promoting paths to leadership and health and wellness to become more effective health professionals and leaders, participants will be able to:

- Identify successful leadership strategies shared by exemplary leaders who share their paths to success and lessons learned
- Identify how to best foster paths to leadership for women in the biomedical academic pipeline
- Demonstrate how organizational structures contribute to health and wellness
- Address how to catalyze change to foster a healthy workplace culture and service leadership
- Define opportunities for personal and professional development skill building on active listening, communication, negotiation and conflict management
- Create and engage future talent to become leaders in academic medicine
