The health arena is rapidly changing.

The UCLA Fielding School of Public Health offers two cohort-based Executive Education programs for working professionals intent on expanding their responsibilities and taking their career to the next level.

The Executive MPH (EMPH) Program provides a comprehensive healthcare management, clinical leadership, and policy education in an executive-style format, imparting the business, managerial, and leadership skills needed to tackle the most critical issues facing healthcare today.

The Master of Public Health for Health Professionals (MPH|HP) Program provides advanced executive-style training in community health, health education, and health promotion for professionals who seek enhanced skills in program planning, implementation, and evaluation.

Dynamic, intensive, and team-based learning specifically designed to accommodate the working professional.